Oral History Interview Agreement

The mission of the Studio for Southern California History is to critically chronicle Southern California history from a social and cultural perspective. By examining history "from the bottom up" the Studio hopes to recover overlooked histories of community and strife in the larger Los Angeles area and to foster a sense of place and political entitlement among Southern Californians. In pursuit of its mission, the Studio is conducting, or has conducted, an oral history in which you participated as an interviewee or interviewer. The purpose of this agreement is to allow the Studio to make this interview available to scholars, teachers, students, and other members of the interested public; to use the contents of this interview in its exhibits, teaching modules and other publications; and to transfer the contents of this interview to other media for purposes of access and/or preservation.

This agreement does not restrict the participant's own use of this interview in any way. The participant grants to the Studio for Southern California History a perpetual, irrevocable, royalty-free right to copy, distribute, publish, and to use the interviews in any written or electronic materials, or other media or formats now existing or hereafter devised. The participant authorizes the Studio for Southern California History to create an abstract and index for this interview, and to create and distribute derivative works in accord with its mission.

Restrictions for use of this interview include (list any restrictions in space below). These restrictions will expire upon the death of the participant.
